CLOSING PRICES OF PHILADELPHIA STOCKS.

ON THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

Wednesday, May 29-p. m. The better market for stock to-day was plainly due to a covering of short contracts, which in news and some London buying. This was not in accordance with the professional prediction last night, but the weather is variable at this time of year, and as there may be showers everywhere before the next market the bears preferred to be safe rather than consistent until Friday. The character of the news about the crops seems as changeable as the weather itself. Officials of the Granger roads declare that little damage has been done. Those traders who are duce contrary reports, equally strong. Some of the tales told are as ridiculous as the one which stated that a strong, middle-aged farmer in Nebraska had been frozen to death last night while planting corn. The best opinion seems to be that, so far, the crops, as a whole, have not been materially injured. The Government report is not particularly discouraging. Naturally the Grangers led the trading in stocks outside the Industrial groups. They closed higher than last night, but not at the highest of the day. Rock Island at one time touched 634, but its final figures were 68%, a net advance of 4. Burlington sold at 814, but declined finally to 80%, a net rise of % only. St. Paul, which with Burlington led the group in activity, ended ½ above yesterday at 66%, having been sold at 674, while Northwestern's latest price was 98%, only ½ below the highest, and yet % above last night's final. The Internationals were strong and up generally by small fractions, and so was Reading. The anthracite situation is supposed to be better because the results of the sales agents' meeting yesterday made it no worse. The low-priced stocks closed irregular. Pacific mail, which gave out an excellent yearly report, met with a sudden drop on the news that another of its steamships had beeh lost. As the company insures its own ships, a cool $200,000 or so is thus while planting corn. The best opinion seems to knocked off the company's actual profits, though they carry $150,000 in expenses to meet such a loss, which sum, for this year, is said to be unexpended. The stock closed at 274, a nat decline of 1½, which is, however, better than the lowest price of the day, 254.

The Industrials did well, generally being marked up a point or two. Rubber gained the most on the reports of increased business and fine profits for the Trust. Some of the insiders said plaintively a while ago that the common stock would sell at 60, if the newspapers would only stop making disagreeable remarks about the Industrials. It sold flually to-day at 443, a net advance of 254, after marked activity. The market closed strong, but not at the highest of the day, total transactions, 240,164.
